Protecting Your Smile:Recent Advances in Preventive Care

BY: KHUSHALI GOSWAMI 3RD YR BDS

Preventive dentistry is an important approach to maintaining oral health and preventing dental problems before they occur. Recent advances in preventive treatments in dentistry have made it easier and more effective to prevent oral health issues.

CARIES PREVENTION

• CARIES VACCINE

Mucosal immunization with S. mutans antigens at inductive sites (GALT) (NALT), ultimately results in the secretion of IgA in the lamina propria, where it crosses the effector tissue ducts into the saliva.

• SILVER DIAMINE FLUORIDE (SDF)

SDF is a non-invasive treatment that can be applied to teeth to prevent and arrest tooth decay. It is a safe and effective alternative to traditional fillings and can help to prevent the need for more invasive treatments.

PERIODONTAL DISEASE PREVENTION

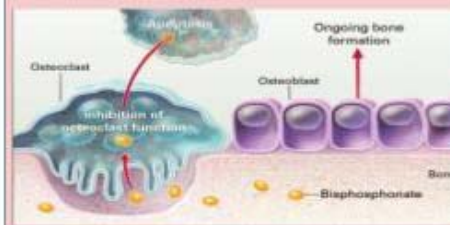

• PHOTODYNAMIC THERAPY

Photodynamic therapy essentially involves the use of light-activated drugs to kill periodontal pathogens.

• BISPHOSPHONATES

Topically administered bisphosphonates have been reported to reduce the resorption of root associated with orthodontic tooth movement and alveolar bone resorption following periodontal surgery.

ORAL CANCER PREVENTION

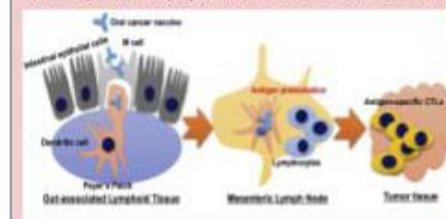

• TRETINOIN BIOFILM

Use of polymer mucosal adhesive film (MAF) technique for cancer prevention has been shown to be safe and effective for such chemoprevention.

• DNA VACCINE

Immunization with L1 DNA vaccines may prevent the development of papillomavirus-associated oral cancer.
